It’s called reading.

That’s how people install new software into their brains.